CARE OF THE NAILS.

It matters little if the hand is classically proportioned and lily white if its nails are poorly shaped and badly kept, or its possessor does not use it with grace and effectiveness.

To begin with, the nails should be rubbed well every night upon retiring with the cold cream or vaseline that is used for the hands. If they are of a brittle nature this must be done more insistently. Then, they require manicuring twice a week, and if you desire to be your own manicurist it may be satisfactorily accomplished in the following manner:

Have before you two bowls, one of clear and the other of soapy water, the former cold and the second tepid, having previously washed the hands thoroughly and dried them as ordinarily. Plunge the hand into the soapy water for two or three minutes, remove it, and gently dry up the loosened skin about the nails with an orange wood stick dipped in cold cream until the "half-moon" is clearly defined. Cut away the superfluous edges of skin.

Next, with a bit of sandboard shape the nails into pretty ovals, not too exaggerated, and, mind you, they are short.
Long nails are neither refined nor sanitary. Use the orange wood stick to clean and polish them by giving them a brisk rubbing with the palm of the opposite hand.

It will help immensely, not only in keeping the cuticle properly away from the nails, but in tapering the fingers, if in drying the hands after each washing a care is taken to wipe the fingers separately, pressing the cuticle back in each instance with the towel. Needless to say, the movement should not be too harsh.

If tiny ridges appear on the nails, they are a sure signal that a change of diet is needed.

All the cleansing lotions are more or less astringent, and too free a use of them should be avoided, as they make the nails so brittle that they break easily, when, if they are to shape themselves to the finger tips, as they should, they must be pliable. Use the scissors as rarely as possible upon the nails. The sandboard will accomplish much better all that is necessary.

If the nails are very thick they may be scraped, but this must be done most carefully, and at that it is wise to leave it to the skillful manicurist to do, as the scraping must be done very evenly or else a series of ridges will result lengthwise of the nail. It requires about a week after the operation for the nail to resume its natural appearance, however cleverly it is done.

Thereafter, and in any case, if oil is lacking in them, rub the nails well with sweet or almond oil, which will in time supply the lack. Contrarily, if the nails are too soft, rub lemon juice and salt into them once or twice a week.

MORGAN'S NEW BANK
FINEST IN WORLD

Plans Show that It Will Occupy $4,000,000 Lot and Cost $2,000,000.

The claim of the world's finest bank has so long been put forward for various financial institutions in New York City as they have been erected from time to time that the announcement of another finest one is likely to receive only passing notice. However, the new building to be erected for J. P. Morgan on the same site where the old one has stood for so many years contains so many unique and hitherto unobserved features, as shown in the plans, that it seems really entitled to the superlative.

To begin with although it is to cost $2,000,000 and stand on property valued at $4,000,000, it is to be only four stories high which means that each floor will represent an investment of $500,000.

Architecturally, it will be one of the wonders of the city since the three upper floors instead of resting on steel girders as is the accepted practice will be hung from great trusses just below the roof. The feature of the lower basement is the foundation of the vault, which will be thirty feet square on the inside. The thickness of the walls will be such that an army could work on it for a month with high explosives but could not get through it. Included in the machinery of the building, which will be located in the lower sub-basement, will be a ventilating system which will draw air in at the roof, warm it, temper it, wash it and distribute it to every room.
The third floor will have many novel features, including a barber shop and two dining rooms for the officers. The fourth floor or top one, suggests a club more than a banking house.

Along the Broad Street side will be a terrace 42 by 2 feet, tiled and half covered by a roof and half by awnings and set about with trellises and growing plants. It cannot be seen from the street and when screened not from nearly high buildings. This is for use on fine days either for luncheon or for conversation.

ance. Altogether no feature has been overlooked which would add to the new building's right to the title of the world's finest bank.

Conservation of Child-life.
From the Pediatric Organism.

There are two kinds of race suicide.
One is the kind against which Col.
Roosevelt inveighs. The other is the kind which allows babies to be brought into the world only to die. War is being made against this latter kind in New York City by means of pure milk stations with attendant physicians and nurses. Its good results are seen to the annual report of the board of health, which shows that last year the death rate for babies decreased 6 per cent, while for the entire population the decrease was only 1 per cent.

That this decrease is due to the agencies mentioned may safely be inferred from the fact that most of it was in Manhattan, where preventive measures are most thorough, while in Brooklyn, where the work was extended beyond its original limits only last summer, there was only a slight decrease, and in the Bronx, which had only three milk stations, there was none.

The inference is plain that the high death rate among infants is preventable waste. To the community each child that is born is an investment, for it is a prospective useful, producing citizen, and each death of a child is an economic loss. It is useless to check the one kind of race suicide by increasing the birth rate unless we at the same time check the other kind by decreasing the death rate. In fact, it would be better to bring into the world a smaller number of children and by giving them better care bring them all to maturity than to give birth to a large number, half of whom would die in infancy.

Proper care of children, which carries with it care of mothers, is our first duty in conservation of human resources, without which conservation of other resources is vain.

VENTILATION OF RAILWAY CARS, THEATERS, CHURCHES, AND HALLS

In Passenger Trains One Is Always Between the Devil of Abdominal Chill and the Deep Sea of Suffocation.

Windows Should Be Let Down from Top.

of Columbia.)
No one educated in hygiene could tolerate the inherently faulty construction of the American railroad carriage. Were the ventilators in the top of the car always open, the atmosphere would be at least tolerable; but the regulation of this matter is in the hands of conductors who are of necessity ill-educated men along these lines, and, therefore, cannot be expected to understand the laws of ventilation without special training. This is not given by the company. In addition, the more frequently the ventilators are opened, the greater is the amount of cleaning to be done to the car; as their position on the roof of the carriage is such as to facilitate the entrance of smut from the engine. The lower windows open from below upward; so that to obtain air for one's lungs it is necessary to subject oneself to the danger of a rapid and concentrated gale of wind blowing over the lower part of the body. The warmer the temperature the more important it is to prevent abdominal chill, a fact well known to residents in tropical climates, who frequently wear "cholera belts" for this purpose.

One's choice, therefore, lies between the devil of abdominal chill and the deep sea of suffocation. The former can be obviated by an extra wrap around the middle of the body; the latter can be avoided only by opening the window on the windward side of the train and sitting nearly doubled up, so as to have one's face below the upper level of the entering breeze.
Of course, the remedy is to compel the railroad companies to construct their vehicles so that they can be let down from the top, thus protecting the body from wind while giving the lungs air.

Where artificial heat is employed, the conditions are different, as a little reflection will show the reader.

Places of assembly are notoriously dangerous disseminators of infection; churches are especially guilty in this respect, for most of them were built to accord with medieval architectural customs. Expired air remains in the building from week to week; it becomes chilled; and its solid matter is deposited on walls and floors along with the moisture it contains. To prevent this, several large windows, high up in the wall, should be opened during and after the service.
When the air is thoroughly renewed, the windows may be closed until the time for the next service, during which period artificial heat may warm the walls and air.

Theaters are much better adapted to ventilation; but too rarely are the windows opened at the conclusion of the performance, and the theater is left all night to be saturated by human emanations.
The consequence is an unpleasant odor and a stuffy feel of the air. The highest windows should be freely opened for at least half an hour after each performance, and then closed to retain the warmth of the furnaces. If necessary, they may be opened during or at the end of the first act. The opening of the door or lower windows is of very little use, and creates a most uncomfortable draught in the orchestra seats.

Large office and factory buildings with mechanical systems of ventilation have

SNOWSTORM IN HOLY CITY.

Some Sleighting Is Enjoyed on the Mount of Olives.

As one would naturally imagine in so generally genial a climate, snow in Jerusalem is as rare as a heat wave in Iceland. Indeed, although the fleecy flakes fall each winter on many of the higher mountains in Palestine, for Jerusalem itself to be covered by a white mantle is regarded as quite a notable event.

The particular snowstorm visited the Holy City in March, 1912. Inclement and cold weather had been experienced for some days, when suddenly snow began to fall heavily and continued to do so on and off for two days, to the per-turbation of the natives.

The result was that the entire city was buried two to three feet deep in soft snow. So anxious were the European inhabitants to take full advantage of such an exceptional occasion that primitive sleighs were requisitioned and the sport indulged in on the Mount of Olives.

There are 2,500 and more in the United States.
